TEXAS HILL COUNTRY

25 - 29 April 2011

Day Agenda

- 1 We will meet at about noon at the San Antonio Airport and begin our adventure. Mature junipers are a source of nesting material for Golden-cheeked Warblers; Black-capped Vireos nest in the thick understory of un-grazed oak thickets. Our search for these two birds will take us into some of the most beautiful landscape in all of Texas. All four nights will be at Neal's & Buchanan Lodges in Concan, where we have observed a male Black-capped Vireo singing five feet from our cabin window, and had the privilege of watching a nesting pair feeding young as we gazed in awe through the spotting scope! This elusive bird may also bathe at a water drip at cabin # 61, along with many other species! Bobcat and Collared Peccary have visited this same water and feeding area.
- 2 We'll spend most of the day birding the scenic Lost Maples State Natural Area. Golden-cheeked Warbler nests here and may be found with mixed flocks containing Yellow-throated Vireo, Acadian Flycatcher, Black-and-white Warbler, and a nice assortment of additional songbirds. There will be Black Phoebe along the creek, where we'll also watch closely for Green Kingfisher. Black-chinned Hummingbird is reliable at the feeders and Zone-tailed Hawk and Common Raven nest here. Twice we have found Mississippi Kites, and once a very cooperative Sora. After a hearty Texas dinner at Neal's Cafe, we will re-focus our attention to another winged creature, the Mexican Free-tailed Bat. We'll visit Rio Frio, a nursery cave where we can also expect great looks at 200 Cave Swallows that share the same roost site. Then we'll watch in awe as 12 million bats emerge in the last hour of daylight. We're also likely to see Red-tailed and Swainson's Hawks and other raptors feeding upon the bats, and possibly find a Ringtail, as we have in the past. After dark we'll search for Chuck-will's-widow and Nine-banded Armadillo.

3 We'll begin our day at the grounds of our lodge, some of the best habitat there is for Black-capped Vireo. We're also likely to find Bell's Vireo, Hooded and Scott's Orioles, Painted Bunting, and possibly a Lazuli Bunting. Bald Cypress along the Frio River at Garner State Park may yield some Neotropical migrants, plus Yellow-throated Warbler and Bushtit. We are also likely to see Dickcissel, Scissor-tailed Flycatcher, Lark Sparrow, Black-bellied Whistling-Duck, and Crested Caracara. Recently we found a Tropical Parula! We'll return to Neal's Lodges, a fine outdoor dinner, and the late day calls of Chuck-will's-widow and possibly a Great Horned, Barn, Barred, or Eastern Screech-Owl.

- 4 If we still need to see Black-capped Vireo, we'll go to Kerr Wildlife Management Area, where it is relatively easy to find. One year we had a female on a nest with its mate nearby. We saw at least five others in the same general area. If we've already had good looks at Black-capped Vireo, we may visit the Uvalde area for a variety of shorebirds, waterfowl, and some nice sparrows. Our final night in Concan.

- 5 We'll pack the van after breakfast and head to San Antonio for our flights home. The drive to the airport may produce a pair of Harris's Hawks as it has in the past. Those continuing on for the Big Bend Tour will fly to El Paso.
